N. S. Pickled Fish

The export demand for spring mackerel continues good, and it is generally thought some of the large buyers in the West Indies are stocking, which will mean a slackening in shipments before very long. Prices are steady at $4 for large and $3.75 for mediums per barrel ex boat. The summer run of fish has not yet shown up in St. Margaret's Bay, but are liable to turn up any time. Several schools have been reported seen off the coast.

The demand for new July grocery herring is a little disappointing, that is, far as the wholesale trade is concerned. Owing to changed marketing conditions, such as trucks peddling from door to door, it is rather difficult to size up the situation. The value is $3.75 to $4 ex boat.

With respect to export herring, the larger West India markets are still overstocked. The probable value ex boat is $2.50 per barrel.—Maritime Merchant.

Canada's Export

Canada's export trade in fish has undergone steady expansion during the last three years. The gain between the fiscal years 1933 and 1935 has been more than 40 per cent. In the last fiscal year, which ended with March, the increase was more than nine per cent. During the last fiscal year the expansion has been notable to both the leading markets for Canadian fish, the United States and the United Kingdom. To the United States the gain was recorded mainly in fresh fish and to the British market in preserved (chiefly canned) fish. Total exports of fish from Canada in the last fiscal year were valued at $24,459,000. In 1933 the value was $17,185,000 and in 1935, $22,425,000.

Lobsters

Catch figures to end of June show that 2,777,300 lbs. less lobsters were caught during the first six months of this year than in the corresponding season of 1935. This represents a shortage of 10 1-2 per cent.

The chief losses were experienced along the north shore of Nova Scotia, and though the catches on the Atlantic Coast kept up better, still the shortage in the whole province figures as 15 per cent.

The Magdalen Islands catch was also disappointing, showing a shortage of 13 1-2 per cent.

In P. E. I. and New Brunswick the results were comparatively better, the former's shortage being reckoned at four per cent and the latter only one and one-half per cent less than last year.

While the export of lobsters in shell is considered equal to last year the quantity canned will be almost 15,000 cases less, according to the present outlook. Prices for the latter have been advanced, but complaints regarding a lessened consumption because of the increased costs continue to be made and create a degree of uncertainty in the minds of those who still hold their goods on this side unsold.

Just now reports further sales of foreign trade are not likely to receive much attention.

Moderate sales continue to be made for Brazil and indications are that slightly higher prices will be obtainable for new catch fish when it is available for shipment.

Unfortunately no progress has been made in negotiations with Italy in the matter of exchange agreements. In fact, latest advices to hand with respect to this matter are far from encouraging. In view of this, the prospects are not yet bright for the early resumption of business with that country. Several fairly large lots of fish have gone in bonded cold stores at Italian ports since January awaiting government permit to enter the country.

Dried Fish Notes

The improved outlook reported in our last two issues continues, says the Maritime Merchant. While nothing has happened to raise our hopes much higher, it may be said at least that there has been nothing to give them a setback. The improvement is perhaps nothing to shout about, but it has been sufficient to remove the sense of despair that seemed to be settling upon people engaged in this trade; it is just enough to provide a ray of hope that things will be restored to some extent, even if the restoration may be gradual.

Meantime advices from the principal dried fish producing countries indicate no change in the position of supplies. It is rather a good point that no increase in the world supply is in evidence, inasmuch as this all operates to prevent pressure on prices.

Conditions in the West India markets, both British and foreign, show no change for the better as yet. They are well supplied with fish, mainly of last year's catch, and until a better relation is established there between supply and demand, prices are apt to be still on the weak side in those markets.

Newfoundland reports further sales of foreign trade are not likely to receive much attention.

Moderate sales continue to be made for Brazil and indications are that slightly higher prices will be obtainable for new catch fish when it is available for shipment.

Unfortunately no progress has been made in negotiations with Italy in the matter of exchange agreements. In fact, latest advices to hand with respect to this matter are far from encouraging. In view of this, the prospects are not yet bright for the early resumption of business with that country. Several fairly large lots of fish have gone in bonded cold stores at Italian ports since January awaiting government permit to enter the country.
